Society of Women Engineers Philadelphia Section March 1999

Letter from the President Sue Sciarratta

I hope everyone had a fun Engineers Week! Congratulations to Lucia Chan, one of two Young Engineers of the Year. I had a blast at the Future Cities Competition and I also judged at the PA Jr. Academy of Science Fair. I was very encouraged by two young women in particular, who I hope will become engineers. One, an 8th grader, invented and constructed a fantastic fire safety device. The other, a 10th grader, studied emissions from an internal combustion engine and provided an impressive discussion about how engines work. Through SWE, we must support and foster the development of these future engineers. One way is to be a judge in science fairs, such as the DE Valley and the International Science Fair. Another way is to get involved in the Certificate of Merit program, career days, or other workshops, where you can be a teacher and role model for students. Also, you can participate in SWE's local or national scholarship programs as a judge or coordinator.

There are plenty of other opportunities within SWE. I'm looking for folks with a little initiative and enthusiasm to take on some new SWE projects, such as the Member Profile column for the newsletter, the fall Networking Night with other women's technical societies, and the fall Saturday Seminar. Also, please take some time to consider running for an elected office or becoming a committee chair. Submit your nominations to Jen Wetzel by March 15 and/or call me or the existing committee chair directly for more information on the responsibilities of a committee chair or officer.

The last thing I want to discuss is membership. 1999 is a crucial year for us to boost our membership numbers, in light of the impending formation of a Delaware Section, the 2004 National Convention, and other planned SWE projects. To this end, I encourage each of you to recruit new members. Host a brown bag lunch at your company to discuss the benefits of SWE membership. If you'd prefer, another SWE member or I can visit your company to speak about SWE. Please contact me if you would like to set something up at your company or organization.

We have fantastic speakers scheduled for our March, April and May member meetings. See inside for details and see you at the next meeting!
